Here is my initial brain dump for the first idea that sparked this book. I'm only copying this here for the purpose of saving some of these ideas. I'm not married to the current idea for this story:

OK I was sitting here in my prayer closet. and I had an idea, a vision. I don't know if this vision is just for me. or if it's a story.. If it's an adventure, but I'm gonna talk about what I've seen. It started with me standing in the middle of a field. Nothing else was around me. It stemmed from the idea. Where Jesus says that a man must lose everything to save his soul. What good is it for him to gain the world and lose himself? It's the idea of a man standing alone in a field. and everywhere around him is just open field. The sun is shining. He's steady, he's standing. He walks. And there's a wall. It's a red wall. It goes as high as the eye can see and as far to the left and right, as well. It's made of some sort of glass, thick, almost like ice, but it's not cold. After wandering around. well, even before that, the man remembers. that he had woken up. on a sand slash grass of a little bubbling brook, a little a little pond. Almost like a well that has been belling up. It's a small little watering hole. There are a few bushes, rocks, and an apple tree right near there. Actually, a fig tree. And the man. D journeys around all day, looking for something, but it's just nothing in all areas. He journeys enough to go one side and finds that it drops off into nothingness. He gets lost and scared. He gets thirsty and hot. He barely has any energy. But he barely sees the fig tree in the distance. He goes running back back. He's so thankful when he gets back to have water to drink. and figs to eat. He goes to sleep underneath the tree. and then he hears a sound, but he doesn't know what it is. He wakes up the next morning to go explore again. This time, he comes across the same thing. He went in a different direction. What he believes to be west, towards where the sun rose. Wait to know to where the sun rose. He actually goes east. What he believes to be east. he finds it's another drop off into nothingness. He's distraught. But he heads straight back, has more water and figs and goes to bed. That night he hears another noise. The next day.. He determines death to go west. The direction the sun has risen. He walks as far as he can, and hes finally sees the red wall. He can't see through it. when he starts to walk in the direction the sea can go around. He doesn't know what's on the other side. He flashes back to his life. He keeps having flashbacks this whole time. his family, his marriage. He's failing as a husband and a father. The sin of.. Sexual sin contaminates his entire family. He tries to break the wall. When he wakes up, he realize he had fallen asleep. It's almost night. He doesn't have time to make it back.. He tries to break the law. He has a terrible night's sleep. So scared, so lonely. so lost. He's scared of his own faith in the reflection of the red. wall. When he wakes up.. He's back by the water. he doesn't remember how he got there. The next day, he gets a rock, and he goes and he tries to break the red wall. He does, and cracks. After He's covered in sweat and tears, he breaks breaks through. He stumbles through the opening. It's exactly like it is on the other side. When he turns around, the wall is completely back together. He starts screaming and yelling. He goes back and bangs on the wall with his fists. Now he's scared because he knows that he doesn't have the water in the figs. He starts sprinting to where the water and the figs would have been on the other side. Which means continuing to head west. He goes and goes and goes, and all the way. until he finds. As he continues to run and running. He comes across.. What looks like a tree in the distance. It's getting late. It's almost dark. As he comes closer. He sees barely through the distance, a man sleeping under the tree. He stops in his tracks. Somebody else... has found his mirage. here. forgets what he looks like. Teams 123 124. Anyone who listens to the word but does not do what it says, is like a man who looks at his face in the mirror. And after doing so, he goes away and immediately forgets what he looks like. Somebody listens to no pay.member new creation. name. The oldest. The old is gone. The old is gone. The only way to get rid of the old is to become an inviration. He sees the man sleeping and he's terrified. He doesn't have anything to defend himself with. He doesn't know if he should go. Wake a man or hide. He decides to go walk miles away, where he can lay in the grass and spy on the man. The next day, he sees the man wake up. and he watches the man leave. Fuck. As far as the east is from the west. As far as the east is in the west of the end. No, east is from the west. That's a far in heart. Which never ends. And he wakes up in the middle, basically. And in the wall. wall was right here. It's on day one. Wake up. goes. It's north, I feel like. You fall asleep on day three. Come on, me.. Verses that have come to my mind since doing this are in Ephesians, where it says, put off your old self in. 2nd Corinthians, where it says, the oldest gone and the newest come, in Psalm, where it says, "Y sins are as far as the east is from the west. The verse that says, "He who does not obey

God's commands is like a man who looks in a mirror, but immediately forgets what he looks like.

Got it. I'll treat this as a concept archive, not a commitment to a final story direction.
